

The Fear to Love Project™

"Never believe that a few caring people cannot change the world. For, indeed, that's all who ever have."

- Margaret Mead -

The Belief:

The greatest gift we can give our children, each other, and the world is to be positive role models for conscious choice, compassionate communication, and healthy, vibrant relationships.

The Challenge:

We cannot teach our children what we haven't learned yet. Without the awareness of healthier options and choices, we default to our old conditioning and unconsciously perpetuate destructive relationship patterns.

The Mission:

To break this cycle of "relationship illiteracy" by empowering women and girls to WAKE UP their relationships and create a sustainable culture of compassion at home, at work, in our schools, and in our world.

The Strategy:

To deliver relationship empowerment classes and coaching programs within non-profit service organizations that support women who are transitioning out of challenging situations* and into achieving self-sufficiency for themselves and their children.

(*Domestic violence, substance abuse, homelessness, underemployment, unemployment)

The Impact:

Stronger, more confident women; healthier, more peaceful families; children who will grow up to be more positive role models for their children; a more loving, peaceful world for all of us.
